Strategies Employed

The Target Fund's goal is to provide income, comprised of dividends and interest, and to achieve long term growth of the fund's value. The fund invests at least 80% of its assets in shares of infrastructure companies from around the world, including companies from developed and emerging market countries. The Target Fund may invest up to 20% of its assets in shares of infrastructure companies from emerging market countries. The Target Fund invests in a number of infrastructure sectors such as gas, electricity and water utilities, toll roads, airports, rail and communications. The Target Fund will usually invest in a concentrated portfolio, typically 30 to 60 companies. The Target Fund may invest in derivatives to help try to achieve the fund's objective as well as to reduce risk or cost or to generate additional growth or income for the Target Fund.

Market Review

Historically, October is a difficult month for equity markets. Many times, the October results season has transformed a "superhero" holding into a terrifying monster or ghoul. October 2024 faced greater uncertainty than normal, while markets swayed on every US election poll result. While not delivering fireworks, October equity markets could not maintain their five-month run of positive returns, falling more than 2% over the month. Growth stocks outperformed their value counterparts but still fell 1.8% in the month, while small caps again underperformed, though the delta was small.

The strategy again outperformed its benchmark, all driven by stock picking. With the US election result a coin toss, it wasn't surprising for market and stock moves to be muted. US markets fell but outperformed other global markets, buoyed by nonfarm payrolls rising by 254,000 (versus the expected 140,000) and the unemployment rate falling to 4.1%. US third-quarter GDP growth came in at a healthy 2.8%, confirming that the economy continues to grow at an above-trend pace.

In Europe, there was more evidence of a weakening economic backdrop, with Germany at the epicentre. Japan also underperformed, partly driven by the hawkish tone from the Bank of Japan at its October meeting, and the ruling coalition's loss in the election adding to political instability. China's recent support measures have renewed focus on the country's equity market. In October, policymakers introduced new initiatives that will allow local governments to use special bonds to purchase land from troubled developers alongside a planned debt ceiling hike for local governments. Despite this positive news, Emerging and Asian markets were among the worst-performing regions, hampered by a stronger dollar.

Investment Outlook

In October, the target fund manager initiated positions in two new Future Quality ideas: Oracle Corporation and First Citizens BancShares. These additions were funded by exiting the remaining position in Hexagon AB, which continues to face growth headwinds, and by taking profits in recent winners such as TransUnion, O'Reilly Automotive, Haleon, and Curtiss-Wright Corporation. The "eventual" outcome of the US election and its impact on markets remains unpredictable. While these uncertainties persist, it is evident that global growth is slowing. Higher interest rates are weighing on economic activity, with consumers in most markets tightening their spending. Meanwhile, heavy debt issuance across Western developed countries leaves real interest rates vulnerable to shifting capital flows and heightened geopolitical uncertainties.

In China, without more aggressive fiscal spending, consumers are unlikely to alter their high savings behavior. Al spending appears to be the only significant growth driver, yet its long-term sustainability is becoming harder to evaluate. While hyper-scalers are delivering robust results, their heavy capital expenditures and subsequent depreciation could challenge their financial stability in 2025. In this context, careful stock selection will be critical to identify opportunities amid potential risks. The target fund manager views the current environment as one where market leadership remains unclear, subdued growth is likely to persist, and the pace of change continues to accelerate. With these dynamics, the target fund manager believes that diversification will be a winning strategy. Accordingly, profits have been taken in year-to-date winners, with reinvestments made in areas positioned well for 2025. Portfolio risk has been lowered to avoid exposure to uncertain or volatile scenarios.

Aiming for stability, the target fund manager draws inspiration from the Japanese concept of "Jimi Halloween," which translates to "mundane Halloween." Instead of extravagant costumes, this subculture embraces plain and simple attire that tells ordinary stories. Similarly, the target fund manager seeks investments that are steady, reliable, and aligned with long-term value, steering clear of unpredictable risks. Lastly, the team bid farewell to valued colleague Ellie Dupois, who has moved to Boston to pursue new opportunities. Ellie met her husband during her time at St Andrews University, and now follows her dreams across the Atlantic. While her departure is bittersweet, the target fund manager has ensured continuity by transitioning Ellie's consumer staples coverage to Ella-Kara Brown, who is well-prepared to take on this responsibility.
